Metabolic parameters (body mass index, blood pressure, glucose, insulin and their values for homeostasis model assessment of insulin resistance) were determined in 23 overweight men aged 40-60 years. Daily intake of energy, protein, lipids, carbohydrates, saturated, mono- and polyunsaturated fatty acids, cholesterol was estimated. Furthermore, an estimation of the coefficient of insulin resistance was made. Obtained results show that there is association of dietary habits with metabolic changes in overweight men and their coefficient of insulin resistance (HOMA-IR = 1.24). Overweight men consume less energy, protein and lipids than recommended. They consume more carbohydrates and polyunsaturated fatty acids, more saturated fatty acids than necessary. The coefficient of insulin resistance of patients is significantly higher, than that found in a group of the same age and gender of normal-weight men. This can be considered as an effect of the development of insulin resistance, which is one of the factors of the development of overweight and its complications., its manifestation and its possible legal remedies. The relatively recent emergence of 'human gene patents' and the push for the collective ownership of human genes, as a second-order possibility of property, has potentially greater significance for the myriad forms of genetic mis-use and abuse that are being established in the world. The owner of the gene or genes could be a medical company that creates new genetic medicines or vaccines, a third party such as a university or a research centre, or a private individual or corporation that, for a fee, f678ea9f9e
